National Directory of Farmers Market and Direct Marketing Associations 2001

Acknowledgments

This study was conducted under a cooperative agreement with the North American Farmers Direct Marketing Association (NAFDMA), Charlie Touchette, Executive Director, and administered by the U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA), Agricultural Marketing Service, Transportation and Marketing Programs, Wholesale and Alternative Markets (W&AM), Errol Bragg, Program Manager.

Jennifer-Claire V. Klotz, economist, W&AM, was project leader for USDA. Tim Payne, economist, W&AM, reviewed project materials and the final report.

Christine Wychorski was project manager for NAFDMA. R. Alden Miller, survey coordinator, and Sharon Miller, secretary, provided assistance.

The United States Department of Agriculture (USDA) prohibits discrimination in all its programs and activities on the basis of race, color, national origin, sex, religion, age, disability, political beliefs, sexual orientation, and marital or family status. (Not all prohibited bases apply to all programs.) Persons with disabilities who require alternative means for communication of program information (Braille, large print, audiotape, etc.) should contact USDA's TARGET Center at (202) 720-2600 (voice and TDD)

To file a complaint of discrimination, write USDA, Director, Office of Civil Rights, Room 326-W, Whitten Building, 14th and Independence Avenue, SW, Washington, DC 20250-9410 or call (202) 720-5964 (voice or TDD). USDA is an equal opportunity provider and employer.

Associations Listed by Services Offered 4

Alphabetical Listing of Associations 7

Appendix - Other Associations with Farmers Market or Direct Marketing Benefits and Services 18

Executive Summary

The United States has 41 local, State, regional, and national farmers market and direct marketing associations. These associations are a valuable resource for farm direct marketers as they offer many benefits and services such as member and consumer directories, conferences, workshops, tours, newsletters, certification, insurance, and government relations.

The Wholesale and Alternative Markets program of the Agricultural Marketing Service (AMS) has worked in cooperation with the North American Farmers Direct Marketing Association to conduct a national survey of farmers market and direct marketing associations and produce the directory. The objective of publishing a national directory of farmers market and direct marketing associations is to make the resources these associations offer direct marketers, consumers, and agricultural professionals more readily accessible. Many producers may not be aware of the benefits of joining an association. And, associations can benefit from knowing what services other associations provide.

Each association's contact information, organizational structure, and benefits and services are listed in the directory (Alphabetical Listing of Associations) as well as information about which geographical area a particular association covers. Two sections, Associations Listed by Services Offered and Associations Listed by State, allow users to undertake a more targeted search.

Only associations whose primary purpose is to improve and facilitate direct marketing are included in the directory. For the purpose of the directory, direct marketing channels are defined as farmers markets, roadside stands/farm markets, Community Supported Agriculture, and pick-your-own operations. There are many other producer, sustainable agriculture, and organic organizations that offer direct marketing resources as a component of their work. Some of these associations are included (alphabetically) in the appendix.[1]

Approximately half of the farmers market and direct marketing associations that participated in the survey are nonprofit 501(c)(3) and 501(c)(6) groups, and about two-thirds have paid staff. Most of these associations collect dues from their members, and about one-third offer membership for consumers. One direct marketing organization traces its roots back to 1956, while many groups were formed during the 1990s when farmer direct marketing experienced a resurgence in popularity.

The National Farmers Market and Direct Marketing Association Directory 2001 will be maintained on the AMS Farmer Direct Marketing Web site at http://www.ams.usda.gov/directmarketing. Associations that would like to be included in future editions of the directory should contact Claire Klotz at (202) 690-4077 or via e-mail at claire.klotz@usda.gov.

[1] The associations listed in the appendix are not cross-listed elsewhere in the directory.

Appendix - Other Associations with Farmers Market or Direct Marketing Benefits and Services

These associations were included in the survey, and responses were received. However, the associations' primary objective is not to facilitate and improve direct marketing. Many of the following associations are sustainable agriculture, fruit and vegetable growers, or organic agriculture associations. These associations have been included in the appendix as they also provide benefits and services that are of interest to farm direct marketers.
